MERCURY

OUR SECRET

Shield Membrane & Multi-layer Lamination: Shield Membrane is made of Thermoplastic Polyurethane (TPU). TPU was first developed in 1937. The material is renowned for many things including its high elongation and tensile strength, elasticity, and to varying degrees, its ability to resist oil, grease, solvents, chemicals and abrasion. One special property about TPU is its segmented molecule structure, which is composed of hard segments (HS) and soft segments (SS). As temperature rises, SS expand and tiny pores are formed on the membrane, allowing water molecules to pass through. In cold weather however, SS tighten up and close up those pores. Because of this special property, TPU-based covers are breathable and at the same times have excellent water resistance. At Shield, we developed a patent-pending lamination process to laminate TPU with fabric layers smoothly and perfectly. In the laminating process, we also added special minerals which can block >99% ultraviolet in the sunshine. Independent laboratory tests have validated the superb quality of Shield covers in properties like water resistance, water vapor transmission, low-temperature bend, tearing strength, and UV blocking, etc.
